

TI De-escalation: Personal Activation Awareness

Participant Worksheet

Name: _____ Date: _____

WHAT DOES STEADY FEEL LIKE?

Think of a time you felt at ease, centered, steady, like a deep breath. Describe that place or moment:

What does steady feel like in your body?

What word or phrase captures that feeling for you? (centered, at ease, steady, grounded, something else?)

MY BODY SIGNALS: HOW I KNOW I'M ACTIVATED

What happens in your body? (tension, heart rate, breathing changes, stomach, jaw, hands)

What happens in your thinking? (racing thoughts, tunnel vision, going blank, worst-case scenarios)

What happens in your behavior? (withdrawing, getting louder, freezing, pacing, clenching)

MY POINTS OF ACTIVATION

What situations, tones, or dynamics tend to activate me? (my points of activation)

Are there particular people, roles, or environments that increase my activation?

What is my earliest sign that I am moving out of my window of tolerance?

MY LIMITS & BOUNDARIES

What are my hard limits? (my hell nos - situations where I should not engage)

What are my soft limits? (situations where I need to check in with myself first)

What helps me come back to baseline after activation?

MY QUICK GROUNDING PLAN

One physical action that brings me back (under 30 seconds):

One phrase I can say to myself:

One person I can call or text when I need support:

"You are the most important tool you have. Know yourself first."

TI De-escalation Module I